THE Norwegians have gained a reputation in modern history for being straightforward and courageous human-itarians, They may excus human frailty, but they do not believe lowed to assert itself un-challenged. Backed by that general attitude, the Socialist party has remained in power for many years in Norway because it offers the people a practical at-tempt to improve conditions without forcing any-thing on anybody. The thing on anybody. The Prime Minister of Norway, who is completing his tour of Israel today, is a distinguished representative of his people and of his party precisely because he is like so many of his country-men: a level-headed, tole-rant but firm humanitar-

Mr. Einar Gerhardsen came to Israel because he wanted to. There were va-lid reasons for his coming. Relations between Norway and Israel have always been good. There are extensive commercial inter-ests between the two countries. And there is the aim shaping a just society ich is common to the Socialist party of Norway and to the Socialists of Is-rael. Indeed, as Mr. Moshe Sharett stressed in greet ing Mr. Gerhardsen at Beit Berl the other day, it was this party link which had friendship between na-

The reasons cited against the visit — and there were attempts to prevent it were of a nature which would not appeal to Nor-wegian self-respect. Political pressure or coercion in any form is resented by Norway. It is in the Nor-wegian tradition to stress that political considera-tions should not be permitted to prolong human suf-fering. Fridtjof Nansen acted in this tradition when he offered a practical solu-tion for the misery of the many thousands of politirefugees scattered through Europe after the first World War without citizenship or identity documents — for any legalistic mind, these people simply did not exist until the Nansen Passport was issued to them. The explorer's son, who had devoted half his lifetime to helping refugees in Europe, noted with disgust the attempts to put off practical means to alle-viate human suffering in the name of politics.

The world is full of problems, and one can only attempt to look for solutions to them that will cause less suffering to fewer men. We hope that on his visit to this country the Prime Minister of Norway will discover the basic idea governing Israel from the moment it has been conceived to the pre-sent day: to build a place where the victims of one special kind of human barbarity may find refuge and a dignity of their own. The process is difficult, ternational standing" visit the mandated territory.

Foreign Minister Eric Louw, in a speech to the U.N. Trusteeship Committee, declined to name the men, but described them "as past presidents of the General Assembly" and coming from different regions.

"Every opportunity will be given to them to see for themselves whether there exists any threat to international peace and security, or whether ists any threat to international peace and security, or whether there is any truth in the allegations relating to military terrorization, the existence of an explosive situation and planned extermination."

Mr. Louw said that the persons have not yet been approached. He added that they will be contacted in their "personal capacities" and "not as representing either the U.N. or their respective governments." Their reports will be made to the South African Government, he said, "who undertake to publish them in toto."

The Trusteeship Committee is now considering a special report of the South-West Africa Committee which describes conditions in the territory as "terrible" and warns that an "compositive situation" that an "explosive situation" exists there which is a threat-to international peace and security.

The Committee declared South Africa unfit to administer the territory, and recommended that it be removed as administrator with control passing to the U.N. or the indigenous peoples of the country.

Great surprise was expres-sed that Dr. Verwoerd saw fit to connect the voting record of South African Jewry, cord of South African Jewry, on domestic political matters, with Israel's position on international problems.
(Dr. Verwoerd stated in his letter, reported in The Jerusalem Post yesterday, that the fact that so many South African Jews voted for the opposition Progressive Party and so few for his own National Party "did not pass unnoticed."

It was pointed out that

It was noted further that Dr. Verwoerd's contention that Arab attacks on South Africa were perhaps the result of South Africa's sympathy toward Israel was a party toward Israel was a misinterpretation of the facts. Arab policy toward the Republic, it was said, is determined by Arab political interests and aspirations in Africa, especially in the emerging nations.

Spurious Attempt

The process is difficult, sometimes painful. If there are successes, they fill the heart with pride; when there are failures — and there must be failures in any such process, of course — one must muster one's determination to continue the search for a better and more practical way of living and letting live.

Mr. Gerhardsen is kindly man, who has seen humanity in all walks of life and who has learned understanding. But he is also a man of unflinching principles, as his life has shown. Here is a man we hope has liked what he has seen and heard, whose appreciation will be valued, and whose criticism respected.

As he takes off after this visit of his, this people wishes him and his party a good journey and safe return.

Mr. Gerhardsen said that Norway and Denmark, both members of Nato, had joined the alliance because it was purely a defensive pact and had no aggressive aims.

Commenting on the criticism voiced by Finniah President Kekkonen of the recent visit to Norway of West German Defence Minister Franz-Josef Strauss, Mr. Gerhardsen in response, said that in Israel "the definition of what is possible seems to be very elastic. That which is impossible in other countries, can be realized here. Only those who have seen with their own eyes what you achieved can believe it."

Yesterday afternoon Prime Minister and Mrs. Gerhardsen also visited the Knesset, seems of Norway's Foreign Minister. In reply to a question about the current Russian visit of Norway's Foreign Minister, Mr. Halvard Lange, the Prime Minister said that the visit was "an old story." He explained that Mr. Lange, in his 16 years as Foreign Minister, had never visited the Suriet Union, and that this past summer he accepted a long-standing invitation to do so. Saplings were planned yeaterday morning in the Dean
Grueber Forest, outside Jerusalem, by a group of visiting German social workers.

The group, which consists of 63 persons, has spent the past two weeks studying local social welfare conditions.
Early this week the group, which is to leave on Friday, decided spontaneously to plant the saplings as an expression of their gratitude for the kind reception and for the professional guidance they received. They raised II.350 among themselves, and on Tuesday 20 of them planted the trees on behalf of the group.

Gerhardsen Press Conference

nade diplomatic repre-ns both to the Soviets pramme in the Soviet Union has been rearranged. At the end of his 12-day visit he will return to Moscow from Leningrad instead of going on to Helsinki. The Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, apent over two hours with Mr. Lange yesterday, in what diplomats termed a "frank atmosphere." Mr. Lange invited Mr. Germyko to visit Norway, diplomats said. Mr. Gromyko to amounced later, they added.) Mr. Gerhardsen also stated that though Norway has not yet taken a definite stand on applying for admission to the Europear. Common Market, it was fairly certain that his government would seek some form of association, on the assumption that both the U.K. and Denmark will also join the group. He said that there was some discussion in Norway regarding the form of membership which the country should seek, and that a decision on this will be taken octore, the end of the year. He expressed the opinion that it was still too early to determine what effect Norway's joining the Market would have on commercial relations with Israel since the conditions of Norway's projected association with the Market were as yet unknown.

The Jerusalem Post learns that it has now been decided to quarry at least part of the 12-ton rocks at Binyamia, near Hadera. The Tirat Yehuda stone was found un-suitable for this purpose. Transport of the boulders from Binyamina to Ashdod has already started by rail.

Citrus Prices In U.K. Plummet

TEL AVIV. — Grapefruit prices dropped sherply to 31/6 per "66" case on the United Kingdom market last week. Lemons fetched a poor 30/6 per two malf-cases.

No comparative prices for the corresponding week of last year were quoted in the report issued yesterday by the Citrus Marketing Board. Thirty-two shillings a case is considered the break-even point.

Last week's price-drop was

Last week's price-drop was attributed to a flooding of the market with competing fruit from Honduras, Trinidad and North Africa.

The Malayan Prime Minister will insist that the three Borneo territories must merge with Malaya at the same time, so that their populations and their representation in the Federal Parliament can offset the influx of Singapore Chinese. At the same time he is keen that the Malaysian Federation should come into being as guickly as possian Federation should come into being as quickly as possible, since the moderate Government of Mr. Lee Kuan Yew in Singapore is already being seriously challenged by the new, left-wing Barisan Socialis Party.

Barisan Socialis are demanding terms of associals demanding terms of associa-tion which the Tengku finds completely unacceptable — full merger, including the This would logically give Singapore anything up to 20 per cent of seats in the Fed-eral Parliament. The Tengku, wary of giving left-wing Singaporeans possible access

The Malayan Prime Minister therefore wants the final terms of merger to be agreed while Mr. Lee Kuan Yew, who supports this formula, is still in office, and the sooner the better. However. the speedy integration of the Borneo territories into the new Malaysis poses an awk-ward problem for the British North Borneo and Sarawak in particular are at a far lower stage of political de-velopment than are Malaya or Singapore, and many of their leaders fear that if they are rushed into federa-tion with Malaya they will simply be exchanging British colonial masters for Malayan ones. London insists that the people of these territories must be consulted before must be consulted before merger takes place but there nerger takes place, but there is widespread feeling among them that their countries should be granted independence and form a Borneo fed-eration of their own before they merge with Malaya.

La Notte (Orion, Tel Aviv) was directed by Michelangelo Antonioni, whose "L'Aventura" was recently shown here, and it received the Gold Bear award for the best film at the 1961 Berlin Festival.

Such story as there is concerns a successful writer (Marcello Mastroianni) and his wife (Jeanne Moreau) who have drifted apart and are both lost in loneliness and the need for love. Her bitterness and frustration are further heightened by the death of a friend (Bernhard Wicki) who was a former suitor. We see her husband busying himself with other women, signing autographs for his admirers; we see her wandering through the streets and dusty empty lots, witnessing with fear a brutal streets and dusty empty lots, witnessing with fear a brutal fight between boys and waiting for who knows what. There is also a visit to a nightclub and to one of those meaningless Society parties that every Italian film features.

The merits of the picture are that it does convey emotion and a mood and there are several sequences that linger in the memory like music. Jeanne Moreau, with her ravaged face, full of desperation, is convincing as a

On the other hand, Antonioni has as little mercy on the spectator as the contemporary composer has on the human voice and it it not surprising that the audience gets rather restless. But just the same, there are moments that are worth waiting for.

It is the story of wandering sheep-herders. The father (Robert Mitchum) loves roaming, the mother (Deborah Kerr) wants a settled home of her own and the small son does not know which way to turn. Peter Ustinov, full of gusto and acting up to the hilt, is supposed to supply the comic relief, and Glynis Johns, usually cast as rather a sweet little thing, depicts a very hospitable barmaid. Sixty-eight-year-old Sir William — "I fly 100,000 miles a year" — has clear things to say about world aviation: 110,000,000 passengers fly in planes a year, "end tourism has not really started yet", Sir William declares. In a few years twice that number of persons will be flying.

"We must make Governments realize that for every dollar spent by tourists on fares, they will leave two dollars in the country they are visiting." he said. It was up to Governments to ease procedures and taxes on airlines. Sir William was sharply critical of those governments who did the very opposite of this, and singled out his own country, Britain, as the worst culprit.
